

Amber Smith is the Founder and Executive Director of Activate Good, a nonprofit that mobilizes thousands of volunteers to improve the community through people-powered projects for good in The Triangle. Activate Good connects individuals, groups, and companies to volunteer needs with over 500 nonprofits and community organizations tackling a range of issues, from hunger, to education, homelessness, and more.

A graduate of NC State University, Amber was honored to receive Wake County's Commission for Women Award, the Independent Weekly Citizen Award, Leadership Triangle's Goodmon Award, and recognition as part of Triangle Business Journal's 40 under 40 for her work promoting a culture of service in the Triangle. Her writing about service and leadership, social innovation, and nonprofits has appeared in Fast Company, the Philanthropy Journal, The Nonprofit Revolution by Wethos, the Journal of Financial Planning, and other media. In 2017, Amber was appointed a commissioner on the North Carolina Commission on Volunteerism and Community Service by Governor Roy Cooper and continues her service on the commission today. Above all, Amber is on a mission to make sure everyone realizes their own potential to change the world!