

Linda Owens, CAE, began her association management career 30 years ago when she joined a local association management company, IMI Association Executives. She started as the Chief Accountant, where she handled all aspects of accounting for IMI and its clients, but her thirst for knowledge kept her volunteering to help in other areas of the office. Over time, Linda worked in every staff position in the company, which ultimately prepared her for becoming the owner of IMI in January 2014. Linda says that she finds it very fulfilling to work with associations. Every day there is the sense that she is contributing in some small way to make the world a better place by assisting professionals in improving themselves and their profession.
